NEW NOVEL BY LALL CAINE.

THE MAHDI. A STORY OF LOVE AND REPOISM. T. HALL CAUNE. The Scapegoat." "The Bondman." The Deemster." "Shadow of a Crime. A Son of Hagar, "The Diangman,

COMMENCED IN OUR COLUMN SATURDAY, 30th MARCH, 1895. Mr. HALL CAINE, who is without doubt, the ablest and most graphic Novelist of the age. has very closely studied the condition of the oppressed peoples of Europe and Northern Africa, and has introduced into his books scenes of intense power taken from actual events. In his letest work, "The Mahdi," Mr. HALL CAINE endeavours to bring home to the hearts of his reders something about that strange personage, the Mahdt which has not previously been published. The Muhdi, in Mr. Caine's judgment, was a hero and a patriot, a man possessing the wisdom almost of a Solomon with the military powers of a Selecip. In hattle he Rhow no real and betone how his and desimal mobs he preserved a ceim and dignified bearing. He struggled to free his countrymen from the 251 tyrants who held power, and he sought to give woman her rightful place as man's equal and help meet:

Such a personage might well form the subject of a book, and in "The Mahdi" Mr. HALL CAINE has utilised the object facts of history and waven into them a love story of universal interest and

Speaking at the annual general meeting of the the China Association on the 26th February Mr. W. Keswick, who occupied the chair, said :-During the ensuing year it may be regarded as certain that the events now in progress will pe fruitful in subjects of extreme importance to every interest connected with the East; and in dealing with China and Japan the fullest measure of justice and consideration should be observed towards them. China in particular should be counselled in her own interest in as clear and vigorone a manner as we can state our case to put her house in order for the future; otherwise, with the progress of the nations around her, and with their energy and restlessness, she will be torn to pieces. It will become only a matter of time, unless she assimilates modern deas and makes herself strong as a nation by progressive improvement, for her to be conmered as India was conquered. Japan, we must hope will be considerate in her demands on China. I do not think we have any reason to expect anything like generosity. I do not know, indeed, that it would be good for China to be treated generously; for then the lessons of adversity and of supreme misfortune might be lorgotten. On the contrary, most probably Japan will exact all she possibly can obtain. hink it is most important that members of the Association should keep in view the changes which are certain to occur, and the endeavour of this Association abould be by information and the expression of well-consistered views, to assist n modding events in a manner that will prove of advantage to China herself, and consequently o all who have intercourse with her

The modern conception of the universe itself. is based on the molecule. This is the smallest mans, into which a substance is capable of being subdivided without changing its chemical nature; but in compounds the molecule itself is divisible into the ultimate particles-known as atoms-of the constituent elements. Every material body consists of these molecules, separated often by distances that are vast in comparison with their own magnitudes, and endowed with rapid and craseless motion. It is worth noting, says the Electrical Plant, that in the various artificial sources of light, the greater part of the energy dissipated in producing non-luminous rays in expended in the production of vibrations having a wave length of about twice that producing the sensation of light. A very superficial examination, however, shows that there is little hope for substantial improvement of the many forms of lamp in use. The Geissler tube is a far ahead of these ordinary lamps as a source of illumination that the attention which has been turned to it by Mr. Tesla and others, with a view to producing a really practical lamp in this form, would appear to be well merited.
